VENETA'S DOWNTOWN FARMERS' MARKET
EGG SALES

Chickens are fun and farm fresh eggs are not only delicious, but significantly more nutritious than conventionally produced eggs.

With the advent of income-driven assistance programs available at our market, eggs are in big demand. With this demand, supply is also on the rise!

In order to protect you and your customers, State and VDFM regulations must be adhered to consistently by every vendor selling eggs.

The following site is Oregon Farm Direct Marketing regulations and standards for handling, labeling, and storing eggs for direct customer sales at Oregon farmer's markets.

https://www.oregon.gov/oda/Documents/Publications/FoodSafety/FarmDirectEggs.pdf

The VDFM will enforce these regulations. Please read this document carefully and adjust your practices if need be.

Farm Direct Marketing regulations do not require you to wash eggs if they are "visibly clean", however, for the protection of our customers, any cartons with unwashed eggs must be clearly labeled as such. Unwashed eggs must also meet refrigeration standards while at the Market.

Additionally, although state law does not require you to carry insurance for Market sales, the VDFM requires that you have general liability insurance with VDFM named as "additional insured".

A certificate of insurance is required before you may provide eggs at the VDFM. If your insurance carrier needs our physical address it is:
